DEMOCRACY'S DAY.

The State Convention and Its Winning Work.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 11.—There was cutting and slashing in the hotel lobbies here last night, but the onslaughts did not practically break the slate mapped out yesterday. Naturally, being the candidates' headquarters, the Grand hotel lobby last night was densely packed with delegates, pushers and talkers in the interest of the various aspirants for state honors. From the lobby floor to the hall, a few steps above, all afternoon and evening until an early hour this morning, went line after line of demagogues to pay their respects to those seeking their suffrages. Munson had the first room leading from the hall, with Dr. Pitzer, his opponent, in the room adjoining, and Girard Reiter, the other seeker, in quarters next to that. Opposite Munson was the room of Martin Krueger, candidate for supreme court clerk. Around these four the crowd throughout the evening centered, giving as far as the crowds go, a pretty fair indication of the interest in the contest aside from the lieutenant governorship. But this does not mean that the other candidates were not equally blessed with callers. The hand-shaking, greetings and interchange of views began here in clouds of cigar-smoke and over glass after glass of ice water. No beverage was stronger than this, and the closeness of the evening made thirst as prevalent as the desire to vote.

LAGRANGE COUNTY MUDDLE.

A few of the mossback delegates affected soreness at the sight of the Allen county delegation and its brass band. Dr. Pitzer issued a card against Colonel Munson, detailing the offices Allen county has had and clamoring for an equal division of patronage. The card re-acted on Pitzer. The friends of the opponents of Munson count on the Twelfth district contest that is to be thrown into the convention. It grows out of the fact that the state delegates were elected in Lagrange county at the congressional primaries and were instructed to vote for Munson. When the chairman of some township committees took issue on this question, and refused to acknowledge the legality of the state convention primaries held as described, other elections were gone through, resulting in the selection of another set of delegates, who are opposed to Munson and favor Pitzer.

TWELFTH DISTRICT GIFTS.

At the twelfth district meeting last night Hon. Henry Monning was made one of the vice presidents of the convention to-day and James H. Burnes, of DeKalb county, was named as assistant secretary. Judge Edward O'Rourke was chosen district committeeman and a member of the state central committee on platform and resolutions, while Hon. Wm. F. McNaguy, of Whitley county, was selected to represent the twelfth district on the committee on credentials. It also named Herman Kreuger, of Noble county, a member of the committee on permanent organization and made Dr. G. W. McConnell, of Noble county, one of the sergeants-at-arms.

THE PLATFORM.

The committee on platform and resolutions met at the governor's office last evening, immediately after the district meetings were held. Hon. Thomas R. Cobb, congressman from the Second district, was made chairman of the committee, and Hon. R. C. Bell was chosen secretary. After a somewhat prolonged secret session, the following was agreed upon as the platform which would be recommended to the convention to-day:

Resolved, That the democratic party, in convention assembled, cordially indorse and approve the ability, integrity and economy of the present administration of our national affairs, and recognize in President Cleveland and the members of the cabinet faithful and patriotic servants.

The democratic party is in favor of gold, silver and paper money, the same being made convertible and put into small bonds, so as to be purchasable by the people at large, and believes in a reduction of taxes, economy in the administration of the government and prompt application of the money in the public treasury to the payment of the public debt.

That the democratic party is now as it always has been, opposed in principle to all sumptuary laws and prohibitory legislation, but is in favor of just and proper means for restricting the traffic in spirituous and intoxicating liquors, under a license system designed to repress the evils of intemperance, and it favors a reasonable license tax and discrimination between malt liquors and wines and distilled spirits, the proceeds of such a tax to go to the support of the public schools.

That the action of the last legislature in repealing the alien laws passed by the preceding legislature, and in passing one favorable to aliens holding lands be heartily indorsed.

A resolution favorable to the building of a monument to the soldiers of Indiana was agreed upon.

The committee adjourned to meet at 9 o'clock this morning.

THE CONVENTION TO-DAY.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 11.—2 p. m.—The convention was called to order by Chairman Henderson, of the state committee, this morning at 10 o'clock. The permanent chairman is Senator Voorhees, and the secretary, Mr. W. J. Craig, the editor of the Sentinel, the committee on permanent organization having agreed upon the two gentlemen for these positions at the meeting held last night.

The convention met in Tomlinson hall. The attendance was large. The members of the state central committee are: First district—E. P. Richardson. Second district—D. I. Buskirk. Third district—S. H. Mitchell. Fourth district—J. S. Swift. Fifth district—E. B. Henderson. Sixth district—D. W. Chambers. Seventh district—J. E. McDonald. Eighth district—J. C. Sawyer. Ninth district—Israel Curry. Tenth district—J. C. O'Dell. Eleventh district—W. H. Hawkins. Twelfth district—Ed. O'Rourke. Thirteenth district—Daniel McDonald.

THE PLATFORM DETAILED.

The platform cordially approves the administration of President Cleveland for its ability, integrity and economy in the management of national affairs. It laments the loss of their honored and trusted leader, Thomas A. Hendricks; also the loss of four other eminent citizens—George B. McClellan, Horatio Seymour, Winfield Scott Hancock and S. J. Tilden.

It favors a reduction of the tariff to a revenue basis, affirming the Chicago platform on this topic. It indorses the forfeit of land held by railroad corporations; it opposes alien ownership of real estate, favors the circulating medium of gold and silver and paper money convertible into loan, and the application of the surplus revenue toward the diminution of the public debt.

It indorses the Indiana state government, opposes all sumptuary laws and prohibitory legislation, but favored just and proper measures for regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors by a license designed to repress the evils of intemperance, discriminating between malt and vinous liquors and distilled spirits, by placing the highest license on the latter.

It commended the legislature for the act prohibiting the importation of foreign laborers. Favors laborers as against monopolists. It demands the abrogation of all laws which do not bear equally on labor and capital. It demands legislation for the protection of employees of railways, manufacturing and mining associations.

It expresses sympathy with Ireland in its struggle for home rule and approves the increase of pensions to different classes of pensioners.

THE NOMINEES.

John C. Nelson, of Cass county, was nominated for lieutenant governor by acclamation.

The other nominations were as follows: Supreme court judge—Joan R. Coffroth, of Tippecanoe.

R. W. Mier, of Monroe county, for secretary of state on the second ballot.

C. A. Munson, of Allen, for auditor of state on the first ballot.

Thomas B. Byrne, of Vanderburg, for treasurer of state.

For Clerk of the Supreme Court—Martin T. Kreuger, of Laporte county. For attorney general—H. D. McMillin, of Dearborn county.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Andrew M. Sweeney, of Dubois county.

NOTES.

Senator Voorhees remarked to-day: "The prospect for democratic success was never better in Indiana. The party is united and we mean to win."

"Do the democrats indorse the administration?"

"I think they do. They appreciate the change from the republican to the democratic form of administration."

Senator Voorhees—The administration is clean, and honest and economical and upright, and is deserving of indorsement. The Indiana democracy will give it, too, without stint—most generously. Some, of course, differ in opinion as to certain features of the administration, but none as to its honesty, integrity and readiness to discharge all proper obligations.

Among the newspaper men in Indianapolis attending the convention are J. T. McCarthy, of Cincinnati Enquirer; George W. Shanklin and J. G. Shanklin, of the Evansville Courier; S. Vater, of the Lafayette Call; E. A. K. Hackett, of the Fort Wayne Sentinel; B. M. Holman, of the Fort Wayne Gazette; J. O. Henderson, of the Kokomo Dispatch; W. D. Pratt and C. B. Landis, of the Logansport Journal; Reuben Daily, of Jeffersonville News; and Harry Francis, of the Michigan City Dispatch.

Senator McDonald says the Indiana democracy must unite on the national administration. To be disunited there would make union in other respects impossible. President Cleveland is all we can reasonably hope for in a president. He is fair, honest, firm, and is most conscientiously democratic in all his acts. If the civil service offers to most minds a case in opposition, it is the statutes that are to blame, and moreover, Mr. Cleveland has taken oath to execute the laws. Yes, not only can democrats sustain the administration, but even republicans who are fair minded must admit that Mr. Cleveland is a man sufficiently public spirited and patriotic to do his whole duty by the country.

Governor Gray says: The democratic party in Indiana, in my judgment, never had stronger reasons to hope for success than in the coming campaign. The country has had a clear and honest administration of federal affairs, which is of more importance to the people than any question of tariff or finance. It is what the people have been demanding for twenty years, and now that it has come, will, I believe, receive an emphatic indorsement at the polls.

The General Assembly of the Knights.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 11.—Frederick Turner, the general treasurer and secretary of the Knights of Labor is here making arrangements for the accommodation of the delegates to the general assembly of the order, which meets here October 4th. Mr. Turner has perfected hotel arrangements for the accommodation of over one thousand delegates. Besides these, Mr. Turner says, there will be one thousand visitors from a distance at the opening of the general assembly. The delegation from New York, composed of eighty-five members, has chartered a steamer, on which it will make the trip and be accommodated during the stay here. The only trouble experienced by Secretary Turner is to secure a hall large enough for the general assembly.

A WRITER in the Boston Transcript, who is traveling in Arkansas, writes that at "Eureka Springs it was my good fortune to meet Col. Boudinot, whose father was an Indian chief of the Cherokees, and in conversation with him he related the incident that led to the discovery of the Springs. For a long time their virtues had been known to the Indians, but they kept the knowledge a profound secret. It was left for the Yankee mind to discover and appropriate their commercial value. An Eastern man afflicted with sore eyes visited the land of the Cherokees, and one day chanced to bathe his eyes in the cooling water of a spring. It seemed to give him relief, and for several days the process was repeated. He found after a few weeks of the treatment that his eyes were completely cured. Then followed Yankee avarice. He bottled up the spring water and sold it to the whites for miles around. His eye-water became famous, and he realized quite a sum from its disposal. But finally his secret was discovered, and the springs became common property."

LABOR AND THE TRADES.

Prospect of a Union Between the K. of L. and Miners.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 11.—The executive committee of the Knights of Labor and coal miners have been in session here to-day, and it has been given out that they have agreed to recommend a consolidation of the two bodies. Action on that recommendation will soon be taken. This makes the miners very formidable in case labor troubles should come up in the Hocking Valley.

THE ANARCHISTS.

The Closing Arguments in Progress Now.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The defendants in the Anarchist trial were all supplied with bouquets in the court to-day. After a little unimportant testimony the argument began.

Quiet Reigns at Belfast Once More.

BELFAST, Aug. 11.—The city was quiet last night. The wounded are improving.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 11.—Mr. Matthews, home secretary was re-elected to the house of commons for East Birmingham without opposition.

Colored Knights Templars at Detroit.

DETROIT, Aug. 11.—The colored Knights Templars of Ohio and Michigan, with visiting Knights from Louisiana, Kentucky, Indiana and Missouri, are meeting in this city, to the number of 1,000.

Failure of a Stock Dealer.

WASHINGTON, IND., Aug. 11.—Mason O. Palmer, a stock buyer of this county, has failed. Liabilities, $5,000; assets, nothing. On one shipment of cattle to New York last week he lost $3,000. His failure is due to the great depression in the prices of stock.

Fire Record.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 11.—The Highland woolen mill, owned by Miss S. A. Haigh, and managed by her father, burned last night. Loss, $40,000; insurance, $25,000. Fifty hands were thrown out of work.

Governor Long is Willing.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—An interview will be published to-morrow with Hon. John D. Long, in which he will intimate his willingness to become United States senator if the legislature so elects.

The Price of Nails.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—The regular monthly meeting of the Western Nail association was held here to-day. The price of nails remains unchanged.

Miners Evicted.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 11.—The striking miners at Scott Haven quietly vacated the company's premises yesterday, except in the case of two families, who were unable to leave on account of sickness.

An Absconding Insurance Agent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The World says that Insurance Agent W. W. Meeker, of 965 Third avenue, has disappeared, and that his accounts with the various companies for which he acted are about $14,000 short.

The Warsaw Summer Resort association having received word that the hull of their new boat was completed. Wm. H. Gibson went to Chicago to inspect it, and if accepted, to ship it to its destination.

A very valuable bed of clay has been found on the farm of Charles Fribble, in Etwa township, Kosciusko county. It is very fine in texture, and while it has the general appearance of what is known as blue clay, only of a finer quality, it burns to a beautiful drab color, and apparently is as hard as iron after passing through the kiln.

He Can Sell the Books.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—In the suit brought by Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) in behalf of C. L. rises on the Atlantic Coast.

The great tidal wave which makes nearly two complete circuits of the globe in every twenty-four hours is very slight in mid-ocean, but increases in height in traversing shallow soundings, and is still further augmented by converging coast-lines. The eastern coast of North America, has, as laid down by Bache, a great "southern bay" between Florida and Cape Hatteras, a "middle bay" between Hatteras and Nantucket, and an "eastern bay" north of Nantucket, and while at Southern Florida the tide is 1 to 1 1/2 feet, at Cape Hatteras 2 feet, at Southeastern Nantucket only 1 foot, the height within the "southern bay," at Savannah, is 7 feet, in the "middle," at the entrance of New York Bay, 5 feet, and in the "eastern," at Boston, 10 feet, and in the narrow bay of Fundy from 40 to 70 feet.

In the short period of one week no less than 952 children died in the cities of New York and Chicago alone. The mortality in New York reached 683 children under five years, an increase of 141 over the preceding week. The deaths in Chicago numbered 263, of whom 199 were less than one year old. These figures, says a contemporary, should remind parents that they have reached that season of the year when infant mortality is greatest, and that, for six weeks or two months, the greatest care should be observed in the treatment of the young. The lives of thousands of infants sacrificed annually through ignorance and inattention. Overfeeding is a prolific source of summer complaints. Even foods that are wholesome and properly prepared may be given in such quantities as to cause sickness. When the stomach is gorged, fermentation, instead of assimilation, is the result; and when nature rebels against cramming, very slight neglect on the part of parents or nurses will be followed by a fatal fever or diarrhea. The use of unripe and unsound fruits and vegetables is another source of danger which cannot be too carefully guarded against. Unceasing vigilance and the exercise of good common sense in the treatment of children are necessary to get them safely through the summer months. They should be given light and nourishing diet only, and in sparing quantities. They should have plenty of fresh air, and their bodies should be bathed daily. Strict attention should be paid to the matter of clothing, so that colds may be avoided as a result of changes of temperature, especially in the evening. When alarming symptoms are developed no time should be lost in summoning a physician. It is always dangerous to trifle with the deadly cholera infantum.

THE MEXICAN TROUBLE.

The Consul General Talks on the Question.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Consul General Navarro, the Mexican representative at this city, regards the war talk as nonsensical and admits his country would be an easy prey for the United States. "It is a matter for discussion and arbitration," he said, "and it does not seem probable that the two governments are going to act like a couple of school boys and come to blows over such a fellow as Cutting. Although Cutting printed his libel on American soil, he circulated it in Mexico and thereupon became amenable to Mexican laws."

EL PASO, TEX., Aug. 11.—An American newspaper correspondent saw Cutting in jail at Paso Del Norte yesterday. Cutting said the only circulation in Mexico was giving a single copy to a friend in the cafe.

A Paper from Ex-Secretary McCulloch.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The annual convention of the national association of American bankers began to-day with more than a usually full attendance of delegates. President Gage delivered the opening address. T. W. Hart, of Boston, delivered an address of welcome. The secretary reported the present membership 1,466. The president read a communication from Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Hugh McCulloch.

Both at the Morgue.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The remains of the woman found dead yesterday morning on Crawford avenue have been identified, but the possibilities are her murderer's body is also at the morgue. The woman is Mrs. Struble. Mrs. Cecarski came to the morgue this morning for her son's body. She found it there, and it was that of the young man who killed himself in Lincoln park last night. The old lady said her son had been on good terms with the Struble woman some time.

President Harrison's Remains.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 11.—A movement has just ripened here to remove the body of ex-President William Henry Harrison from the old vault at North Bend and place it in Spring Grove cemetery. The consent of Senator Harrison has been obtained and the removal will take place in September, when the body of ex-Governor Chase is brought to Spring Grove.

Short in His Accounts.

ELKHART, IND., Aug. 10.—There was a great deal of excitement in our city, yesterday, caused by the announcement that J. W. Kellogg, who has been secretary of the St. Joseph Valley Building and Loan association for the last five years was short in his accounts to the extent of about $9,000. The exact amount is unknown and the books are now in the hands of an expert accountant.

Buffalo Bill's Prospective Wealth.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Wm. F. Cody, better known as "Buffalo Bill," received word to-day from his lawyer at Cleveland that he is likely to win his suit for the property on Euclid avenue, Cleveland. The land is valued at $1,500,000, and was illegally transferred by a grand uncle of Mr. Cody.

Catarrh Cured

Catarrh is a very prevalent disease, with distressing and offensive symptoms. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives ready relief and speedy cure, from the fact it acts through the blood, and thus reaches every part of the system.

"I suffered with catarrh fifteen years. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am not troubled any more with catarrh, and my general health is much better." J. W. LILLIS, Postal Clerk Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

"I suffered with catarrh 6 or 8 years; tried many wonderful cures, inhalers, etc., spending nearly one hundred dollars without benefit. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was greatly improved." M. A. ANNEY, Worcester, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by these peculiarities: 1st, the combination of the medicinal agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. H. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." L. HARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Congress, 12th District,
HON. ROBERT LOWRY, of Allen.

The latest hobby of the Sultan of Turkey is the care of the soldiers wounded in the recent skirmishes on the Greek frontier. He not only has built a separate hospital for them, and provided a physician for each soldier, but has ordered that every man of them be promoted and photographed in the new uniform.

While Roscoe Conkling was passing along Park Row, New York, the other day, in a heavy rainstorm, he saw an aged Italian frantically endeavoring to get his fruit-cart under shelter. One wheel had caught on the steep curbstone, and the old vender had not strength enough to force the cart up the sidewalk. He pushed and pulled, and looked the very picture of despair. Mr. Conkling watched the Italian's wild efforts for a moment. Then he shut his umbrella and rolled up the sleeve of one arm. He seized the hub of the entangled wheel, and, with a powerful yank, landed it upon the sidewalk, after which he put up his umbrella and went on his way.

How many bugs in a house suffice to make it "unfit for human habitation?" This was the question which Mr. Justice Mathew was called on to answer lately, says the Pall Mall Gazette. It was proved that "the furnished house in a fashionable West End quarter" contained several dozen of the brutes; but this number, the learned Judge decided, was "not enough to oust the tenant," who accordingly had to pay the rent. How many, then, are "enough to oust a tenant?" As a matter of fact, they had been ample enough to oust this particular tenant, who had left the house at the first attack. But law is not made for particular cases. It would have been satisfactory, however, if Mr. Justice Mathew had laid down at what point a tenant may capitulate to the enemy without forfeiting his right to legal consideration.

LEON TOLSTOI, the greatest of Russian writers, who has renounced the ways of the world the better to carry out the precepts of the Gospel, lives in a common country house, consisting of one immense room, and filled with all sorts of necessary articles, including libraries of useful books and manual tools. The children work in turn at the bench or at the desk. When the one quits his manual labor the other leaves his intellectual task and takes the other's place. The wife occupies her time in making clothes for the poor. Tolstoi, says his visitor, discoursed with an infinite earnestness of mind, a grandeur of expression, and a biblical simplicity of sentiment that ordinary minds could not understand. He spoke of his literary works, now read all over the world, with deep melancholy, and added: "How vain is all that! When I think that there are millions of agonizing beings awaiting the word of truth, impatient for the light, and that I have only this poor trash to give them! Oh, there is something else to be done, believe me; but I seek, I strive."

ONE of the pleasantest of the old young men of Washington is the Hon. Harvey M. Watterson, the father of Henry Watterson (writes Mr. Frank G. Carpenter to the Cleveland Leader). Imagine to yourself a tall and slightly-built man, with a large head of gray hair, a white beard falling upon his chest, and a pair of the brightest and kindest blue eyes you will find anywhere. Imagine this man to be 75 years old, but at the same time to move about with as firm a step as though he was but 35. Listen to his voice, and it comes forth in strong chest-tones. Talk to him, and he will tell you that he feels younger as the years grow older, and that he hopes to last for many years yet. Said Mr. Watterson once to me, in response to a question: "The first sign of man's failing faculties is seen in his voice. I can go on the street and speak in such tones as can be heard 300 yards away. I spend my winters at Washington and my summers at Louisville, and while there I look over the exchanges in the newspaper office, and scan about fifty papers a day. I am glad that I am alive, and I feel that my good health at this age is due to temperance, and in not allowing myself to be worried about anything. I am very careful of my eating, and have not had three unhappy hours from worry in my whole life. When I have stubbed my toe I have not damned the universe because of my carelessness, but thanked the Lord that I did not break my neck."

Why Is It
That the sale of Hood's Sarsaparilla continues at such a rapidly increasing rate?

1st. Because of the positive curative value of Hood's Sarsaparilla itself.
2d. Because of the conclusive evidence of remarkable cures effected by it, unsurpassed and seldom equalled by any other medicine. Send to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., for book containing many statements of cures.

It is always encouraging to note new signs of civilization among the howling red men. They quickly picked up the white brother's habit of getting drunk and whipping their squaws, but at this point they seemed to have reached the limit of their ability to be civilized, and a long halt was made in the march of progress. They have recently taken another step. The Indians at the Rosebud Agency, Dakota, went out on strike a few days ago. The Agent wanted to dictate how certain farming implements were to be used. He insisted, for instance, that the horse should be attached to the front end of the plow, and not between the handles. The Indians held a meeting and discussed their grievances. As a result, they all went out on strike next day, and they struck so often and so hard that the Agent yielded and was glad to make peace on their terms, and stand treat into the bargain.

A REMARKABLE scene was recently witnessed by the guests who had assembled at Cleveland to see the marriage of Henry Zucker to Miss Weiss. When the rabbi had affixed his signature to the license, the groom asked to see it. It was handed to him, when to the astonishment of every one present he deliberately tore it up, saying that the ceremony need not go on. The entire party pleaded with him to change his mind, but he would not listen to them. Then the relatives of the bride threatened dire vengeance upon the obdurate groom, but it had no effect. The police were summoned and asked to put Zucker under arrest, but they would not do it without a warrant. Zucker then explained his queer actions by saying that a cousin had admonished him not to marry Miss Weiss, saying that if he did he would never speak to him again. The rabbi easily convinced Zucker of the vapidity of this excuse, and after considerable delay the ceremony was resumed and finished satisfactorily.

THE Lamartine statue recently erected in Paris represents its eminent subject sitting in a chair in a thoughtful attitude. A greyhound lies beneath the chair. Lamartine, it is remarked, outlived himself. The great orator, brilliant author, and political idol closed his career in almost obscure poverty. He eked out a precarious livelihood by doing hack work for the newspapers, and often had to borrow a few francs until he could get his pay at the end of the week. Paris honors Lamartine at length with a monument, as it has already of late honored many less worthy men. But it puts it in an out-of-the-way place not at all identified with any great event in his career. It was suggested that the statue should be placed before the Hotel de Ville, his tribune, or on the peristyle of the Chamber of Deputies, to commemorate his eloquence; or near the Institute, to glorify the author of the "Meditations," or at the Lyons Railway station, in memory of his success in promoting that great work. But no. It is decreed to stand in the Place Victor Hugo, henceforth to be known as the Place Lamartine—a home at second hand.

SUPERFLUOUS WOMEN.

AS THEY ARE TO BE SEEN IN DIFFERENT CIRCLES IN BOSTON.

The Gynness of the Inevitable—Statistics Substantiated—Intellectual Feasts. How They Become so Great—Literary Bunthornes—A Problem for Sociologists.

[Special Correspondence.]
BOSTON, Aug. 9.—The superfluous woman in Boston is a fact—a grim, realistic, numerical fact, which can neither be ignored nor properly adjusted in the social economy. She is pervasive to a point that ought to interest legislators in her behalf. I don't mean that she is careering through the world at any startling pace, soaring unprotected masculinity into apprehensions of matrimony. On the contrary, she is, for the most part, a modest person, and a most worthy person. She pervades solely because of her numerosity. She can't help it. She is everywhere. The atmosphere is dense with femininity. Every time I come to Boston I notice it more and more. Travelers who land here for the first time, firm in the belief that the superfluity of women in Massachusetts is a newspaper joke, generally haul down their flag and surrender at the end of the week. It all means something if we could only read the signs aright. Yesterday a man was telling that his sister's family had just been increased by a pair of twins. "Unfortunately they are girls," he said, and he sighed as he spoke.

A sensible woman spoke up: "Don't you think the Creator knows what he is about? Would he create women, superfluous or otherwise, for any but a wise purpose?" To which the sinner nothing replied. I will say it, an excess of femininity is as bad for society as an excess of masculinity. It is mentally enfeebling to both men and women. In many boarding houses rows of husbandless women, maids and widows, young and old, surround the tables, much to their own disgust. Here and there a consumptive youth or a shaky old man relieves the petulant monotony and feeds his own vanity at the same time. That's the worst of it! What men there are pass for twenty times their worth on account of their scarcity, till they grow so great in their own estimation that they become insufferable to everybody save those who are obliged to endure them.

Like the backwoodsman who praised his sweetest till she would speak to him, she thought she was so much his superior—the superfluous women of Boston get paid for their homage to men in much the same coin. They are lorded over, snubbed, put down and otherwise made to feel their insignificance in the presence of a creature born to pantaloons and command. The creature may be frequently is—little in body and mind, narrow of soul and feeble as to brain, and with a face as unkind as an Aztec god. All the same, he believes he is a most satisfactory piece of the creator's handiwork. He hasn't enough rivals to keep him humble.

"Marry that old man!" said a young lady, when a recent May and December alliance was being discussed. "Why shouldn't she? I would marry anybody—mark you, anybody—to get out of my present environment." The young ladies of this city talk a good deal about their environments. What was her environment? The routine work, the drudgery even, of a home that was only kept together by keeping boarders. There industry waged a spirited and rather hopeless battle with poverty in its gentler aspects. Her imagination was active, and by reason of her "environment" rather depressed in tone, and she saw herself growing old, neglected, disheartened, and virtually imprisoned—for you are truly imprisoned when you know you are in a place which you can only get out of by a miracle. For this reason she drew her conclusions rather strong. Had she been a grade higher in brain she would have taken to "careerism," and would have succeeded, too, for the Boston woman of good executive brain knows no such word as fail.

A SUPERFLUOUS GIRL AND HER SISTER.

Here is one of Boston's 20,000 girls in excess of the pantaloon gender. This is her picture in the early spring of her youth, when she neither realizes nor fears her superfluity. Observe her mocking smile at the elder sister before her, who was once as young and hopeful as she, but who now sees the husband she hoped for vanishing to a point in the whithermost of the where. Woman in Boston is frequently a hopeless and unattached fact at 30. Not only are marriageable men scarce here, but opportunities of financial independence for women are, it seems to me, fewer than elsewhere. The hopeful old maid and the old maid who has lost hope may be distinguished, the one from the other, anywhere. The latter is settled and bookish looking; has the air of having renounced the world—otherwise men—and taken up philosophy. The former looks as though she still intended to "cast an anchor to windward" if she should have a chance.

I was invited to a club meeting, and it was "Patience" without the music, sure enough. It was a woman's club, of course; but the meeting was an open one—open to both sexes—the news went round with a joyful sound. It was greatly talked up. The impression was given me that the meeting would be an occasion of extraordinary interest; an affair which, if I were to miss, I should spend the remainder of my life in regrets over. Holders of invitations were made to feel that they had been favored of the gods. The Rev. Mr. Grindwell would read a paper on dead poets. That of itself, I knew not why, seemed to impart a mysterious excitement to everyone who contemplated being present. All were made to feel that a light would be thrown on the rhythmic dead such as had never been on sea or land, and which it would be well to see. I made up my mind that Mr. Grindwell was an obsequious learner who opened his mouth but seldom, but when he did he electrified his hearers.

I went early, feeling that I couldn't have too much of so exalted a privilege as even looking at the man who was to bring the departed poets before our eyes and make them live again. The pretty party were full of expectation—with women. The stand for the reader was backed in flowers, and behind the speaker's chair, which was still vacant, flowers were massed with a prodigality extraordinary in Boston.

An air of serious expectancy hung about the place. The company had evidently gathered for a united watch at ignorance, and a determined avowal of their allegiance to the fetish Culture. One young lady appeared at the door with an escort. This created profound agitation in the audience. Heads were turned, and eyeglasses, thirty strong, or perhaps stronger, were leveled at the extraordinary spectacle. The Boston woman is put into eyeglasses almost as soon as she can walk. The escort, a timid being in his forties, a stranger in Boston, with hair parted in the middle and an air of being on unfamiliar ground, glanced in, saw the dense array of femininity, muttered something about not knowing that gentlemen were not expected and slunk away. His escape occasioned great excitement at the door and in the hall, and considerable agitation inside. Three or four able-bodied women went after him without delay and lured him back without the aid of ropes. I heard them try to put him at his ease by assuring him that "another gentleman" was in the audience. They gave him a place near the door and he shrank into a chair in an attitude of the most painful embarrassment. The "other gentleman," a pale lad of 17, sat on the opposite side. He looked across and smiled strength and support to the unhappy stranger. This somehow had the effect of putting the gentleman at his ease. It seemed to take away his fear, and he almost looked as if he thought he might enjoy himself.

THE READER AS HE APPEARED BEFORE THE CLUB.

The orator, or reader, arrived next. He was hustled in by a heavy of fair women in front and also in the rear. He carried the signs of dyspepsia, melancholy, malaria, and three or four other foes to the flesh in his face, and wore next to no hair at all. This is a picture of him after he got well along with his reading.

The vigorous Boston climate and too much homage to the fetish Culture had done their fatal work. I could not but think that he ought to be very careful what he said about dead poets, since in all human probability he would be called to account by some of them before a great while. He was armed with a stack of manuscript books, each an inch thick, and read them conscientiously through. Essay on "a male compilation," in which poets of the past were set on tolerably high pedestals—such of them as he fancied. Goethe and a few others he dismissed as "old fellows" of no particular importance; but Dante got his most flowery eulogies.

A young lady of western origin, now a resident of this city, accompanied me. While the able orator cleared his throat at the end of the fifth book, preparatory to beginning on the sixth, she whispered:

"Boston dearly loves dead people. The reader they are the more it adores them. It assumes that there are no living people worth talking or writing about. We live in an atmosphere of stale thought. Indeed, it might be truthfully said that although we take our meals in Boston, we really live in ancient Athens. I often feel as if I was 2,000 or 3,000 years old."

This explanatory interlude threw light on the settled look I had noticed on so many faces—too much mousing in the past, and not half enough interest in living thought. When the orator finished his sixth book with a quotation in Massachusetts Italian, a buzz of admiration burdened the air. He sat down amid his flowers, half drowned in smiles. The ladies were greatly pleased with him, but he was still more pleased with himself.

The president, a woman fair to see, thanked him in the most overwhelming manner. He rose and bowed his profoundest acknowledgments. He also murmured something so full of feeling that it died away behind the flowers. He still stood. Another lady arose, and in trembling accents expressed her thanks for the precious privilege of hearing the paper. From her words I gathered that she had had an exceptionally happy life, full of joys, blessings and opportunities, but they all paled in comparison with the pleasure of hearing the orator of the day on dead poets. In fact, she was well nigh overcome by the kindness of heaven in being spared to make one of the favored company. Mr. Grindwell took it seriously, as it was meant, and grew more and more in love with himself.

This was the ninth essay read to that club on the same subject within three years. Observe the luminosity and breadth of the clef-musical spectacles. He wears two pairs, which indicates that he looks at things far beneath the surface. My wicked western friend whispered that the protuberance on his right side was caused by a masked liver pad.

One lady near me slept profoundly through a large portion of the reading; but at its close she arose and said never in her life had she heard so able, clear and exhaustive a discourse on poets as this one. Another lady arose and said the same thing. And still another and another. The scene began to take on a startling likeness to "Patience." Bunthorne wasn't young, but he was happy. One, two, three, four more ladies arose in turn to pour out their gratitude for the flood of light cast on dead poets. It was touching. The lady Bunthorne still stood. Then the whole club, realizing afresh how much it owed him, united in a solid vote of thanks. This cleared the sky of the excess of gratitude which was fast choking everybody. When Mr. Grindwell had again bowed his thanks another woman sprang up and implored him to tell them something about the ideal. The reverend gentleman felt nervously in his vest pocket without finding even a scrap of "the ideal" and excused himself.

The meeting was finally broken up, and the intellectual Bunthorne again revealed the bread of individual thanks, cut particularly thick, and well buttered. He also received six or eight enormous bouquets, and went away thereafter as a young and beautiful debutante. "That's the way we acquire our culture," said my satirical friend.

"Yes; that's the way we exalt each other," he continued. "If anybody jumps over a broomstick here, we all unite in declaring that no one else could do it with such grace, elegance and art, and a day or two later we assert that the same person could jump over 1,000 broomsticks just as easily as over one, and we believe it, too. Take any thought and foster it, and it will have the same effect. That is the kind of meat we feed on to make us great in our own estimation. We exalt each other all the time. It develops self-confidence, and that moves the world. Perhaps you might call this conceit or egotism; but, you see, it keeps us in good humor with ourselves, and in a state of admiration for each other."

To the Cuticura Remedies I Owe My Health, My Happiness, and My Life.

A day never passes that I do not think and speak kindly of the Cuticura Remedies. Seven years ago, all of a dozen lumps formed on my neck, ranging in size from a cherry stone to an orange. The large ones were frightful to look at, and painful to bear; people turned aside when they saw me, in disgust, and I was ashamed to be on the street or in society. Physicians and their treatment, and all medicines failed to do any good. In a moment of despair I tried the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura, the great skin cure, and Cuticura Soap, an exquisite skin beautifier. externally, and Cuticura Resolvent, the new blood purifier, internally; the small lumps on my neck gradually disappeared, and the large ones broke in about two weeks, discharging large quantities of matter, leaving two slight scars in my neck today to tell the story of my suffering. My weight then was one hundred and fifteen pounds; my weight now is one hundred and sixty-one and a half pounds, and my height is only five feet five inches. In my travels I praised the Cuticura Remedies, North, South, East and West. To Cuticura Remedies I owe my health, my happiness, and my life. A prominent New York druggist asks me the other day, "Do you still use the Cuticura Remedies; you look to be in perfect health?" My reply was, "I do, and shall always. I have never known what sickness is, since I commenced using the Cuticura Remedies." Sometimes I am laughed at by friends, thinking that to people in my position, to have their senses and believe the same as these that use them, as doctors have whom I have told. May the time come when there shall be a large Cuticura supply house in every city in the world, for the benefit of humanity. The Cuticura Remedies shall be sold only, so there will be a need of ever ordering a drug store.

Sneezing Catarrh

The distressing sneeze, sneeze, sneeze, the acid, watery discharges from the nose and the painful inflammation extending to the throat, the swelling of the mucous membrane causing choking sensations, coughs, ringing noises in the head and spinning dizziness—how familiar these symptoms are to thousands who suffer periodically from hay fever, or influenza, and who live in ignorance of the fact that a single application of Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh will afford instantaneous relief.

But this treatment in cases of simple catarrh gives but a faint idea of what this remedy will do in the chronic form, where the breathing is obstructed by chronic, purulent mucous accumulations, the hearing affected, speech and taste gone, throat inflamed and broken cough gradually fastening itself upon the debilitated system. Then it is that the marvelous curative power of Sanford's Radical Cure manifests itself in instantaneous relief. Cure begins from the first application. It is rapid, radical, permanent, economical, safe.

Sanford's Radical Cure consists of one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box of Catarrhal Solvent and an improved inhaler, price, $1.00. PORTER DRUG & CHEMICAL CO., BOSTON.

The political cast so frequently given to the conduct of the Grand Army posts has induced the formation of democratic veteran associations in many places. They are out and out political organizations, and the test of membership is a clean military record, good social standing, and fealty to the democratic party.

The friends of Miss Josephine Large will be glad to learn that she will return to Fort Wayne to assist Miss Anderson in a school of music to be opened here during the month of September. Miss Large's experience as a pianist and teacher of choral music combine to make her a valuable acquisition to the musical circles of our city.

Wilson & Son were awarded the contract to furnish coal to the water works department at $2.95 a ton. Boltz & Derheimer's proposal was $3.10; Wilding & Son, $3.05 and J. P. Tinkham, $3.25. The coal was furnished last year at $2.65 a ton, but Mr. Wilson says the prices at the mines are higher this year and necessitates an increased price here.

John W. Gray, who has a force of men to excavate the branch of Little River ditch through the Rockhill stock farm, had to stop work yesterday. Men are at work repairing the feeder and paper mill dam and the water at the St. Joe river is temporarily turned through the old canal. This opens into the Little River branch ditch and makes a flood. Gray is kicking hard.

Owing to the neglect of the telegraph operator at Potosky Monday night, the north bound local freight train, on the Grand Rapids and Indiana collided with the passenger train from Harbor Springs about a mile north of Bay View. The engines were damaged and the engineer of the passenger train was slightly injured. The passengers were badly shaken up but none were seriously injured. The operator failed to deliver a message to the conductor of the freight train, thus causing the accident.

The Normal school at Valparaiso has just closed its thirteenth year. The number graduating in the various departments is as follows: Law, 17; elocution and oratory, 23; musical, 14; scientific, 76; classic, 15; total, 145. The enrollment during the past year has reached over 2,000. There are representatives from nearly all the states and territories. Many of these are teachers seeking greater efficiency. This is the largest school of the kind in the United States.

Mr. J. J. McGowan, of Chicago, is in the city, the guest of his friend Mr. John Nelligan. Mr. McGowan was the gentleman who organized the Knights of Labor at Stony Point and it was against him Mr. John M. Carthy directed his attack on the Knights of Labor and for which he was boycotted. Mr. McGowan makes a different statement of the controversy and certainly he comes out with dignity and honor to himself. Mr. McGowan is now employed at Pullman and is enjoying a three weeks vacation.

The state house fund, July 1, contained a balance of $311,191.12. July expenditures and August estimates reduce this amount about $40,000. About $200,000 has been reserved from estimates, and the fund will be drawn pretty nearly dry before the fall taxes are available. The state treasurer estimates that about $250,000 will have to be borrowed by the legislature to complete the building. The total cost, including the prospective loan, will fall within $2,000,000. The expense of furnishing will increase the total cost to more than $2,000,000, probably.

The old roads of the country continue to increase their rolling stock. A contract has been let for the construction of 2,202 new standard freight cars for the Pennsylvania system west of Pittsburg. The cost will be $1,000,088, and the cars will be built at once by the following companies: United States rolling-stock company, Ohio car manufacturing company, Missouri car and foundry company, Michigan car company and the Peninsular car company. At their shops in Altoona, they are building twenty elegant bay-window parlor cars, and turning out three to five new locomotives per month. At the Fort Wayne shops twenty-five mammoth class "T" engines are being built.

WAR TALK.

Capt. E. B. Smith Ready to Organize a Company to Go to Mexico.

The war dispatches in THE SENTINEL created a sensation last evening and the unpleasantness with Mexico was everywhere discussed. Capt. E. B. Smith, the ex-chief of police, was the first man to say he wanted to organize a company to go into Mexico, when Uncle Sam issued his first call. Mr. Smith's proposition was received with favor and he has numerous applications for membership now.

Most people look at war with Mexico as a trifling affair. For the benefit of those who have not either time or inclination to inform themselves on the subject, THE SENTINEL will give them a few cold facts which will doubtless convince them that the war with Mexico would mean something more than an impromptu riot. Mexico comprises altogether twenty-seven confederate states, one territory and the federal district, with an area of 763,804 miles. In 1880 the population was estimated at 9,577,279, though a noted writer in 1882 placed the figure at 12,000,000. She has a coast line of 6,000 miles; about 4,200 miles are on the Pacific and 1,600 on the Atlantic. The city of Mexico forms a square of three miles both ways, covering within the walls an area of ten square miles, with a population in 1880 of 230,000. The character of the Mexicans may be learned in the city of Mexico. Most of the inhabitants are pure blood Indians or Mestizoes, and they are particularly cowardly, cruel, fierce and ungovernable. A large portion of the natives are mendicants or vagrants, and the distinctly criminal element, 26,470 in 1873, is presided over by a police force of 1,320 men; yet in that year there were 5,370 knife attacks and 3,250 robberies. In a short time Mexico could mass a very formidable body of men. The Mexicans are great braggarts, and as it was shown forty years ago, are no match for Uncle Sam's soldiers.

SIR KNIGHTS ABROAD.

The Fort Wayne Commandery Entertained at Warsaw.

The Fort Wayne Knights Templar returned yesterday from Warsaw, where they were in camp. The Warsaw Times has this of the reception tendered them Monday evening: "The reception and banquet tendered by Warsaw Commandery last evening to the visiting Sir Knights of Fort Wayne and their ladies, was, we are informed, by those who were there, a very fine affair. The attendance of Knights from Fort Wayne was not as large as anticipated, but there were Knights present from Plymouth, Bourbon, Larwill, Indianapolis, North Manchester, Elkhart, Milford and Leesburg. Speeches were made; a number of good songs by Loveday's quartette were executed; Mr. John Lathrop executed a very fine cornet solo; Al. Ruch gave a comic song, and N. W. Richard a couple of solos, while Superintendent Law, of the Pittsburg road, responded with two or three songs. The collation spread was very fine, and all in all, it was a very pleasant occasion."

A NEW WRINKLE.

The Special Mail Delivery to be Enlarged.

Postmaster Kaough has information that the postoffice department will soon entirely remodel the present regulations in regard to the 10-cent stamp special delivery letters. The bill passed by congress, and which was signed by the president, instead of restricting this service to offices in town of 4,000 inhabitants or more, extends it to every office in the country, and to all classes of mail matter as well as letters. The postmasters are to receive eight cents for each letter, and are to be allowed to make what arrangements or contracts they may desire to secure the prompt delivery of this class of mail matter. It will not be required that a force of carrier boys should be maintained.

DEMOCRACY'S DAY.

The State Convention and Its Winning Work.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 11.—There was cutting and slashing in the hotel lobbies here last night, but the onslaughts did not practically break the state mapped out yesterday. Naturally, being the candidates' headquarters, the Grand hotel lobby last night was densely packed with delegates, pushers and talkers in the interest of the various aspirants for state honors. From the lobby floor to the hall, a few steps above, all afternoon and evening until an early hour this morning, went line after line of democrats to pay their respects to those seeking their suffrages. Munson had the first room leading from the hall, with Dr. Pitzer, his opponent, in the room adjoining, and Girard Reiter, the other seeker, in quarters next to that. Opposite Munson was the room of Martin Kreuger, candidate for supreme court clerk. Around these four the crowd thronged the evening centered, giving as far as the crowds go, a pretty fair indication of the interest in the contest aside from the lieutenant governorship. But this does not mean that the other candidates were not equally blessed with callers. The hand-shaking, greetings and interchange of views began here in clouds of cigar-smoke and over glass after glass of ice water. No beverage was stronger than this, and the closeness of the evening made thirst as prevalent as the desire to vote.

LAGRANGE COUNTY MIDDLE.

A few of the mosback delegates affected solemnity at the sight of the Allen county delegation and its brass band. Dr. Pitzer issued a card against Colonel Munson, detailing the offices Allen county has had and clamoring for an equal division of patronage. The card re-acted on Pitzer. The friends of the opponents of Munson count on the Twelfth district contest that is to be thrown into the convention. It grows out of the fact that the state delegates were elected in Lagrange county at the congressional primaries and were instructed to vote for Munson. When the chairman of some township committee took issue on this question, and refused to acknowledge the legality of the state convention primaries held as described, other elections were gone through, resulting in the selection of another set of delegates, who are opposed to Munson and favor Pitzer.

TWELFTH DISTRICT GIFTS.

At the twelfth district meeting last night Hon. Henry Monning was made one of the vice presidents of the convention to-day and James H. Burges, of DeKalb county, was named as assistant secretary. Judge Edward O'Rourke was chosen district committeeman and a member of the state central committee on platform and resolutions, while Hon. Wm. F. McNaguy, of Whitley county, was selected to represent the twelfth district on the committee on credentials. It also named Herman Kreuger, of Noble county, a member of the committee on permanent organization and made Dr. G. W. McConnell, of Noble county, one of the sergeants-at-arms.

THE PLATFORM.

The committee on platform and resolutions met at the governor's office last evening, immediately after the district meetings were held. Hon. Thomas R. Cobb, congressman from the Second district, was made chairman of the committee, and Hon. B. C. Bell was chosen secretary. After a somewhat prolonged session, the following was agreed upon as the platform which would be recommended to the convention to-day: Resolved, That the democratic party, in convention assembled, cordially indorse and approve the ability, integrity and economy of the present administration tion of our national affairs, and recognize in President Cleveland and the members of the cabinet faithful and patriotic servants.

The democratic party is in favor of gold, silver and paper money, the same being made convertible and put into small bonds, so as to be purchasable by the people at large, and believes in a reduction of taxes, economy in the administration of the government and prompt application of the money in the public treasury to the payment of the public debt.

That the democratic party is now as it always has been, opposed in principle to all summary laws and prohibitory legislation, but is in favor of just and proper means for restricting the traffic in spirituous and intoxicating liquors, under a license system designed to repress the evils of intemperance, and it favors a reasonable license tax and discrimination between malt liquors and wines and distilled spirits, the proceeds of such a tax to go to the support of the public schools.

That the action of the last legislature in repealing the alien laws passed by the preceding legislature, and in passing one favorable to aliens holding lands be heartily indorsed.

A resolution favorable to the building of a monument to the soldiers of Indiana was agreed upon.

The committee adjourned to meet at 9 o'clock this morning.

THE CONVENTION TO-DAY.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 11.—2 p. m.—The convention was called to order by Chairman Henderson, of the state committee, this morning at 10 o'clock. The permanent chairman is Senator Voorhees, and the secretary, Mr. W. J. Craig, the editor of the Sentinel, the committee on permanent organization having agreed upon the two gentlemen for these positions at the meeting held last night.

The convention met in Tomlinson hall. The attendance was large. The members of the state central committee are:

- First district—E. P. Richardson.
- Second district—D. I. Baskin.
- Third district—S. H. Mitchell.
- Fourth district—J. S. Swift.
- Fifth district—E. B. Henderson.
- Sixth district—D. W. Chambers.
- Seventh district—J. E. McDonald.
- Eighth district—J. C. Sawyer.
- Ninth district—Israel Curry.
- Tenth district—J. C. O'Dell.
- Eleventh district—W. H. Hawkins.
- Twelfth district—Ed. O'Rourke.
- Thirteenth district—Daniel McDonald.

THE PLATFORM DETAILED.

The platform cordially approves the administration of President Cleveland for its ability, integrity and economy in the management of national affairs. It laments the loss of their honored and trusted leader, Thomas A. Hendricks; also the loss of four other eminent citizens—George B. McClellan, Horatio Seymour, Winfield Scott Hancock and S. J. Tilden.

It favors a reduction of the tariff to a revenue basis, affirming the Chicago platform on this topic. It indorses the forfeit of land held by railroad corporations; it opposes alien ownership of real estate, favors the circulating medium of gold and silver and paper money convertible into loan, and the application of the surplus revenue toward the diminution of the public debt.

It indorses the Indiana state government, opposes all summary laws and prohibitory legislation, but favors just and proper measures for regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors by a license designed to repress the evils of intemperance, discriminating between malt and vinous liquors and distilled spirits, by placing the highest license on the latter.

It commended the legislature for the act prohibiting the importation of foreign laborers. Favors laborers as against monopolists. It demands the abrogation of all laws which do not bear equally on labor and capital. It demands legislation for the protection of employees of railways, manufacturing and mining associations.

It expresses sympathy with Ireland in its struggle for home rule and approves the increase of pensions to different classes of pensioners.

THE NOMINEES.

John C. Nelson, of Cass county, was nominated for lieutenant governor by acclamation.

The other nominations were as follows:

- Supreme court judge—John R. Coffroth, of Tippecanoe.
- R. W. Mier, of Monroe county, for secretary of state on the second ballot.
- C. A. Munson, of Allen, for auditor of state on the first ballot.
- Thomas B. Byrne, of Vanderburg, for treasurer of state.

For Clerk of the Supreme Court—Martin T. Kreuger, of Laporte county. For attorney general—H. D. McMillin, of Dearborn county.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Andrew M. Sweeney, of Dubois county.

NOTES.

Senator Voorhees remarked to-day: "The prospect for democratic success was never better in Indiana. The party is united and we mean to win."

"Do the democrats indorse the administration?"

"I think they do. They appreciate the change from the republican to the democratic form of administration."

Senator Voorhees—The administration is clean, and honest and economical and upright, and is deserving of indorsement. The Indiana democracy will give it, too, without stint—most generously. Some, of course, differ in opinion as to certain features of the administration, but none as to its honesty, integrity and readiness to discharge all proper obligations.

Among the newspaper men in Indianapolis attending the convention are J. T. McCarthy, of Cincinnati Enquirer; George W. Shanklin and J. G. Shanklin, of the Evansville Courier; S. Vatter, of the Lafayette Call; E. A. K. Hackett, of the Fort Wayne Sentinel; B. M. Holman, of the Fort Wayne Gazette; J. O. Henderson, of the Kokomo Dispatch; W. D. Pratt and C. B. Landis, of the Logansport Journal; Reuben Daily, of the Jeffersonville News; and Harry Francis, of the Michigan City Dispatch.

Senator McDonald says the Indiana democracy must unite on the national administration. To be dissatisfied there would make union in other respects impossible. President Cleveland is all we can reasonably hope for in a president. He is fair, honest, firm, and is most conscientiously democratic in all his acts.

If the civil service offers to most minds a case in opposition, it is the statutes that are to blame, and moreover, Mr. Cleveland has taken oath to execute the laws. Yes, not only can democrats sustain the administration, but even republicans who are fairminded must admit that Mr. Cleveland is a man sufficiently public spirited and patriotic to do his whole duty by the country.

Governor Gray says: The democratic party in Indiana, in my judgment, never had stronger reasons to hope for success than in the coming campaign. The country has had a clear and honest administration of federal affairs, which is of more importance to the people than any question of tariff or finance. It is what the people have been demanding for twenty years, and now that it has come, will, I believe, receive an emphatic indorsement at the polls.

The General Assembly of the Knights.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 11.—Frederick Turner, the general treasurer and secretary of the Knights of Labor is here making arrangements for the accommodation of the delegates to the general assembly of the order, which meets here October 4th. Mr. Turner has perfected hotel arrangements for the accommodation of over one thousand delegates. Besides these, Mr. Turner says, there will be one thousand visitors from a distance at the opening of the general assembly. The delegation from New York, composed of eighty-five members, has chartered a steamer, on which it will make the trip and be accommodated during the stay here. The only trouble experienced by Secretary Turner is to secure a hall large enough for the general assembly.

A writer in the Boston Transcript, who is traveling in Arkansas, writes that at "Eureka Springs it was my good fortune to meet Col. Boudinot, whose father was an Indian chief of the Cherokees, and in conversation with him he related the incident that led to the discovery of the Springs. For a long time their virtues had been known to the Indians, but they kept the knowledge a profound secret. It was left for the Yankee mind to discover and appropriate their commercial value. An Eastern man afflicted with sore eyes visited the land of the Cherokees, and one day chanced to bathe his eyes in the cooling water of a spring. It seemed to give him relief, and for several days the process was repeated. He found after a few weeks of the treatment that his eyes were completely cured. Then followed Yankee cunningness. He bottled up the spring water and sold it to the whites for miles around. His eye-water became famous, and he realized quite a sum from its disposal. But finally his secret was discovered, and the springs became common property."

The great tidal wave which makes nearly two complete circuits of the globe in every twenty-four hours is very slight in mid-ocean, but increases in height in traversing shallow soundings, and is still further augmented by converging coast-lines. The eastern coast of North America, has, as laid down by Bache, a great "southern bay" between Florida and Cape Hatteras, a "middle bay" between Hatteras and Nantucket, and an "eastern bay" north of Nantucket, and while at Southern Florida the tide is 1 to 1 1/2 feet, at Cape Hatteras 2 feet, at Southeastern Nantucket only 1 foot, the height within the "southern bay," at Savannah, is 7 feet, in the "middle," at the entrance of New York Bay, 6 feet, and in the "eastern," at Boston, 10 feet, and in the narrow bay of Fundy from 40 to 70 feet.

In the short period of one week no less than 932 children died in the cities of New York and Chicago alone. The mortality in New York reached 681 children under five years, an increase of 141 over the preceding week. The deaths in Chicago numbered 263, of whom 129 were less than one year old. These figures, says a contemporary, should remind parents that they have reached that season of the year when infant mortality is greatest, and that, for six weeks or two months, the greatest care should be observed in the treatment of the young. The lives of thousands of infants are sacrificed annually through ignorance and inattention. Overfeeding is a prolific source of summer complaints. Even foods that are wholesome and properly prepared may be given in such quantities as to cause sickness. When the stomach is gorged, fermentation, instead of assimilation, is the result; and when nature rebels against cramming, very slight neglect on the part of parents or nurses will be followed by a fatal fever or diarrhea. The use of uricope and unseasoned fruits and vegetables is another source of danger which cannot be too carefully guarded against. Unceasing vigilance and the exercise of good common sense in the treatment of children are necessary to get them safely through the summer months. They should be given light and nourishing diet only, and in sparing quantities. They should have plenty of fresh air, and their bodies should be bathed daily. Strict attention should be paid to the matter of clothing, so that colds may be avoided as a result of changes of temperature, especially in the evening. When alarming symptoms are developed no time should be lost in summoning a physician. It is always dangerous to trifle with the deadly shocks of infantile

SUPERFLUOUS WOMEN.

AS THEY ARE TO BE SEEN IN DIFFERENT CIRCLES IN BOSTON.

The Grimness of the Inevitable—Statistics Substantiated—Intellectual Feats. How They Became so Great—Literary Banishment—A Problem for Sociologists.

[Special Correspondence.]

Boston, Aug. 9.—The superfluous woman in Boston is a fact—a grim, realistic, numerical fact, which can neither be ignored nor properly adjusted in the social economy. She is pervasive to a point that ought to interest legislators in her behalf. I don't mean that she is careering through the world at any startling pace, scaring unprotected masculinity into apprehensions of matrimony. On the contrary, she is, for the most part, a modest person, and a most worthy person. She pervades solely because of her numerosity. She can't help it. She is everywhere.

The atmosphere is dense with femininity. Every time I come to Boston I notice it more and more. Travelers who land here for the first time, firm in the belief that the superfluity of women in Massachusetts is a newspaper joke, generally hunt down their flag and surrender at the end of the week. It all means something if we could only read the signs aright. Yesterday a man was telling that his sister's family had just been increased by a pair of twins. "Unfortunately they are girls," he said, and he sighed as he spoke.

A sensible woman spoke up: "Don't you think the Creator knows what he is about? Would he create women, superfluous or otherwise, for any but a wise purpose?"

To which the sinner nothing replied.

I will say it, an excess of femininity is as bad for society as an excess of masculinity. It is mentally enfeebling to both men and women. In many boarding houses rows of husbandless women, maids and widows, young and old, surround the tables, much to their own disgust. Here and there a consumptive youth or a shaly old man relieves the petticoated monotony and feeds his own vanity at the same time. That's the worst of it! What men there are pass for twenty times their worth on account of their scarcity, all they grow so great in their own estimation that they become insufferable to everybody save those who are obligate to endure them.

Like the backwoodsman who praised his sweethearts till she wouldn't speak to him—she thought she was so much his superior—the superfluous women of Boston get paid for their homage to men in much the same coin. They are larded over, smothered, put down and otherwise made to feel their insignificance in the presence of a creature born to pantaloons and command. The creature may be—frequently is—little in body and mind, narrow of soul and feeble as to brain, and with a face as unimpressive as an Antioch god. All the same, he believes he is a most satisfactory piece of the creator's handiwork. He hasn't enough rivals to keep him humble.

"Marry that old man!" said a young lady, when a recent May and December alliance was being discussed. "Why shouldn't she? I would marry anybody—mark you, anybody—to get out of my present environment." The young ladies of this city talk a good deal about their environments. What was her environment? The routine work, the drudgery even, of a home that was only kept together by keeping borders. There industry waged a spirited and rather hopeless battle with poverty in its gaudier aspects. Her imagination was active, and by reason of her "environment" rather depressed in tone, and she saw herself growing old, neglected, disheartened, and virtually imprisoned—for you are truly imprisoned when you know you are in a place which you can only get out of by a miracle. For this reason she drew her conclusions rather strong. Had she been a grade higher in brain she would have taken to "careering," and would have succeeded, too; for the Boston women of good executive brain know no such word as fail.

A SUPERFLUOUS GIRL AND HER SISTER.

Here is one of Boston's 20,000 girls in excess of the population gender. This is her picture in the early spring of her youth, when she neither realizes nor fears her superfluity. Observe her mocking smile at the elder sister before her, who was once as young and hopeful as she, but who now sees the husband she hoped for vanishing to a point in the whithermost of the where. Woman in Boston is frequently a hopeless and unattached class.

Not only are marriageable men scarce here, but opportunities of financial independence for women are, it seems to me, fewer than elsewhere. The hopeful old maid and the old maid who has lost hope may be distinguished, the one from the other, anywhere. The latter is settled and bookish looking; has the air of having renounced the world—otherwise men—and taken up philosophy. The former looks as though she still intended to "cast an anchor to windward" if she should have a chance.

I was invited to a club meeting, and it was "Patience" without the music, sure enough. It was a woman's club, of course; but the meeting was an open one—open to both sexes—so the news went round with a joyful sound. It was greatly talked up. The impression was given me that the meeting would be an occasion of extraordinary interest, an affair which, if I were to miss, I should spend the remainder of my life in regrets over. Holders of invitations were made to feel that they had been favored of the gods. "The Rev. Mr. Grindwell would read a paper on dead poets. That of itself, I knew not why, seemed to impart a mysterious excitement to everyone who contemplated being present. All were made to feel that a light would be thrown on the rhythmic dead such as had never been on sea or land, and which it would be well to see. I made up my mind that Mr. Grindwell was an obelisk of learning who opened his mouth but seldom, but when he did he electrified his hearers.

I went early, feeling that I couldn't have too much of so exalted a privilege as even looking at the man who was to bring the departed poets before our eyes and make them live again. The pretty parlors were full to repletion—with women. The stand for the reader was backed in flowers, and behind the speaker's chair, which was still vacant, flowers were massed with a prodigality extraordinary in Boston.

An air of serious expectancy hung about the place. The company had evidently gathered for a united whack at ignorance, and a determined avowal of their allegiance to the felicit Culture. One young lady appeared at the door with an escort. This created profound agitation in the audience. Heads were turned, and eyes, thirty strong, or perhaps stronger, were leveled at the extraordinary spectacle. The Boston woman is put into eyeglasses almost as soon as she can walk. The escort, a timid being in his forties, a stranger in Boston, with hair parted in the middle and an air of being on unfamiliar ground, glanced in, saw the dense array of femininity, muttered something about not knowing that gentlemen were not expected and slunk away. His escape occasioned great excitement at the door and in the hall, and considerable agitation inside. Three or four able-bodied women went after him without delay and lured him back without the aid of ropes. I heard them try to put him at his ease by assuring him that "another gentleman" was in the audience. They gave him a place near the door and hoshrak into chair in an attitude of the most painful embarrassment. The "other gentleman," a pale lad of 17, sat on the opposite side. He looked across and smiled strength and support to the unhappy stranger. This somehow had the effect of putting the nervous gentleman at his ease. It seemed to take away his fear, and he almost looked as if he thought he might enjoy himself.

THE READER AS HE APPEARED BEFORE THE CLUB.

The orator, or reader, arrived next. He was hustled in by a levy of fair women in front and also in the rear. He carried the signs of dyspepsia, melancholy, malaria and three or four other foes to the flesh in his face, and wore next to no hair at all. This is a picture of him after he got well along with his reading.

The vigorous Boston climate and too much homage to the felicit Culture had done their fatal work. I could not but think that he ought to be very careful what he said about dead poets, since in all human probability he would be called to account by some of them before a great while. He was armed with a stack of manuscript books, each an inch thick, and read them conscientiously through. His essay was an "able compendium," in which poems of the past were set on tolerably high pedestals—such of them as he fancied. Goethe and a few others he dismissed as "old fellows" of no particular importance; but Dante got his most flowery eulogies.

A young lady of western origin, now a resident of this city, accompanied me. While the able orator cleared his throat at the end of the fifth book, preparatory to beginning on the sixth, she whispered:

"Boston clearly loves dead people. The dealer they are the more it adores them. It assumes that there are no living people worth talking or writing about. We live in an atmosphere of stale thought. Indeed, it might be truthfully said that although we take our meals in Boston, we really live in ancient Athens. I often feel as if I was 2,000 or 3,000 years old."

This explanatory interlude threw light on the settled look I had noticed on so many faces—too much musing in the past, and not half enough interest in living thought. When the orator finished his sixth book with a quotation in Massachusetts Italian, a buzz of admiration burst out of the air. He sat down amid his flowers, half drowned in smiles. The ladies were greatly pleased with him, but he was still more pleased with himself.

The president, a woman fair to see, thanked him in the most overwhelming manner. He rose and bowed his profound acknowledgments. He also murmured something so full of feeling that it died away behind the flowers. He still stood. Another lady arose, and in trembling accents expressed her thanks for the precious privilege of hearing the paper. From her words I gathered that she had had an exceptionally happy life, full of joys, blessings and opportunities, but they all paled in comparison with the pleasure of hearing the orator of the day on dead poets. In fact, she was well high overcome by the kindness of heaven in being spared to make one of the favored company. Mr. Grindwell took it seriously, as it was meant, and grew more and more in love with himself.

This was the ninth essay read to that club on the same subject within three years. Observe the luminosity and breadth of the clergyman's spectacles. He wears two pairs, which indicates that he looks at things far beneath the surface. My wicked western friend whispered that the probableness on his right side was caused by a masked liver pad.

One lady near me slept profoundly through a large portion of the reading; but at its close she arose and said never in her life had she heard so able, clear and exhaustive a discourse on poets as this one. Another lady arose and said the same thing. And still another and another. The scene began to take on a startling likeness to "Patience." Bantmore wasn't young, but he was happy. One, two, three, four more ladies arose in turn to pour out their gratitude for the flood of light cast on dead poets. It was touching. The lady Bantmore still stood. Then the whole club, realizing afresh how much it owed him, united in a solid vote of thanks.

This cleared the sky of the excess of gratitude which was fast choking everybody. When Mr. Grindwell had again bowed his thanks another woman sprang up and implored him to tell them "something about the ideal." The reverend gentleman felt nervously in his vest pocket without finding even a scrap of "the ideal" and excused himself.

The meeting was finally broken up, and the intellectual Bantmores again received the bread of individual thanks, but particularly thick, and well buttered. He also received six or eight enormous bouquets, and went away as flower-laden as a young and beautiful debutante.

"That's the way we acquire our culture," said my satirical friend.

"Yes, that's the way we exalt each other," she continued. "If anybody jumps over a broomstick here, we all unite in declaring that no one else could do it with such grace, elegance and art, and a day or two later we assert that the same person could jump over 1,000 broomsticks just as easily as over one, and we believe it, too. Turn any thought and foster it, and it will have the same effect. That is the kind of meat we feed on to make us great in our own estimation. We exalt each other all the time. It develops self-confidence, and that moves the world. Perhaps you might call this conceit or egotism; but you see, it keeps us in good humor with ourselves, and in a state of admiration for each other." GERTRUDE GARRISON.

To the Cuticura Remedies I Owe My Health, My Happiness, and My Life.

A day never passes that I do not think and speak kindly of the Cuticura Remedies. Seven years ago, all of a sudden I became very ill, my neck, ranging in size from a cherry stone to an orange. The large ones were frightful to look at, and painful in being; people turned away when they saw me, in disgust, and I was ashamed to be on the street or in society. Physicians and their treatment, and all medicines failed to do any good. In a moment of despair I tried the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura, the great skin cure, and Cutanema Soap, an exquisite skin beautifier, externally, and Cutanema Resolvent, the new blood purifier, internally; the small bumps on my face gradually disappeared, and the large ones broke. In about two weeks, discharging large quantities of matter, leaving two slight scars in my neck, which then was one hundred and fifteen sickly pounds; my weight now is one hundred and sixty-one and a half pounds, and my health is only five feet five inches. In my travels I praise the Cuticura Remedies. North, South, East and West. To Cuticura Remedies I owe my health, my happiness, and my life. A prominent New York druggist, who has used the Cuticura Remedies, says: "You look to be in perfect health." My reply was, "I do, and shall always. I have never known what sickness is since I used the Cuticura Remedies. Sometimes I am lashed at by prying them to people not acquainted with their merits, but sooner or later they will come to their senses and believe the same as those that use them, as dozens have whom I have told. May the time come when there shall be a large Cuticura supply house in every city in the world." (Written by Mrs. J. M. G. Garrison, who cured her skin disease with Cuticura.)

Sneezing Catarrh

The distressing sneeze, sneeze, sneeze, the acid water, the itching nose, the eyes and nose, the painful inflammation extending to the throat, the swelling of the mucous lining, causing choking sensations, coughs, sneezing, and a host of other ailments, are the result of a cold in the head and inflamed nasal passages. How familiar these symptoms are to thousands who suffer periodically from head colds or influenza, and who live in ignorance of the fact that a single application of Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh will afford instantaneous relief.

But this treatment in cases of simple catarrh gives but a faint idea of what this remedy will do in the chronic form, where the breathing is obstructed by choking, purulent mucous accumulations, the hearing affected, and taste gone, throat irritated, and hacking cough gradually fastening itself upon the debilitated system. Then it is that the marvelous curative power of Sanford's Radical Cure manifests itself. Cure begins from the first application. It is rapid, radical, permanent, economical, safe.

Sanford's Radical Cure consists of one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box Catarrhal Solvent and an Improved Inhaler, price, $1.

The political cast so frequently given to the conduct of the Grand Army post has induced the formation of democratic veteran associations in many places. They are out and out political organizations, and the test of membership is a clean military record, good social standing, and fealty to the democratic party.

The friends of Miss Josephine Large will be glad to learn that she will return to Fort Wayne to assist Miss Andemon in a school of music to be opened here during the month of September. Miss Large's experience as a pianist and teacher of choral music combine to make her a valuable acquisition to the musical circles of our city.

Wilson & Son were awarded the contract to furnish coal to the water works department at $2.95 per ton. Boltz & Derhoimer's proposal was $3.10; Wilder & Son, $3.05 and J. P. Tinkham, $3.25. The coal was furnished last year at $2.65 a ton, but Mr. Wilson says the prices at the mines are higher this year and necessitates an increased price here.

John W. Gray, who has a force of men to excavate the branch of Little River ditch through the Rockhill stock farm, had to stop work yesterday. Men are at work repairing the feeder and paper mill dam and the water at the St. Joe river is temporarily turned through the old canal. This opens into the Little River branch ditch and makes a flood. Gray is kicking hard.

Owing to the neglect of the telegraph operator at Potoskey Monday night, the north bound local freight train, on the Grand Rapids and Indiana collided with the passenger train from Harbor Springs about a mile north of Bay View. The engines were damaged and the engineer of the passenger train was slightly injured. The passengers were badly shaken up but none were seriously injured. The operator failed to deliver a message to the conductor of the freight train, thus causing the accident.

The Normal school at Valparaiso has just closed its thirteenth year. The number graduating in the various departments is as follows: Law, 17; elocution and oratory, 23; musical, 14; sci-utiles, 76; classic, 15; total, 145. This is the largest school of the kind in the United States.

Mr. J. J. McGowan, of Chicago, is in the city, the guest of his friend Mr. John Nelligan. Mr. McGowan was the gentleman who organized the Knights of Labor at Stony Point and it was against him Mr. John McCarthy directed his attack on the Knights of Labor and for which he was boycotted. Mr. McGowan makes a different statement of the controversy and certainly he comes out with dignity and honor to himself. Mr. McGowan is now employed at Pullman and is enjoying a three weeks vacation.

The state house fund, July 1, contained a balance of $311,191.12. July expenditures and August estimates reduce this amount about $10,000. About $200,000 has been reserved from estimates, and the fund will be drawn pretty nearly dry before the fall taxes are available. The state treasurer estimates that about $250,000 will have to be borrowed by the legislature to complete the building. The total cost, including the prospective loan, will fall within $2,000,000. The expense of furnishing will increase the total cost to more than $2,000,000, probably.

The old roads of the country continue to increase their rolling stock. A contract has been let for the construction of 2,202 new standard freight cars for the Pennsylvania system west of Pittsburgh. The cost will be $1,000,000, and the cars will be built at once by the following companies: United States rolling-stock company, Ohio car manufacturing company, Missouri car and foundry company, Michigan car company and the Peninsular car company. At their shops in Altoona, they are building twenty elegant hay-window parlor cars, and turning out three to five new locomotives per month. At the Fort Wayne shops twenty-five mammoth class "T" engines are being built.

WAR TALK.
Capt. E. B. Smith Ready to Organize a Company to Go to Mexico.

The war dispatches in THE SENTINEL created a sensation last evening and the unpleasantness with Mexico was everywhere discussed. Capt. E. B. Smith, the ex-chief of police, was the first man to say he wanted to organize a company to go into Mexico, when Uncle Sam issued his first call. Mr. Smith's proposition was received with favor and he has numerous applications for membership now.

Most people look at war with Mexico as a trifling affair. For the benefit of those who have not either time or inclination to inform themselves on the subject, THE SENTINEL will give them a few cold facts which will doubtless convince them that the war with Mexico would mean something more than an impromptu riot. Mexico comprises altogether twenty-seven confederate states, one territory and the federal district, with an area of 763,804 miles. In 1880 the population was estimated at 5,577,279, though a noted writer in 1882 placed the figure at 12,000,000. She has a coast line of 6,000 miles; about 4,200 miles are on the Pacific and 1,600 on the Atlantic. The city of Mexico forms a square of three miles both ways, covering within the walls an area of ten square miles, with a population in 1880 of 250,000. The character of the Mexicans may be learned in the city of Mexico. Most of the inhabitants are pure blood Indians or Mestizos, and they are particularly cowardly, cruel, fierce and ungovernable. A large portion of the natives are mendicants or vagrants, and the distinctly criminal element, 26,470 in 1878, is presided over by a police force of 1,320 men; yet in that year there were 5,870 knife attacks and 3,250 robberies. In a short time Mexico could mass a very formidable body of men. The Mexicans are great braggarts, and as it was shown forty years ago, are no match for Uncle Sam's soldiers.

SIR KNIGHTS ABROAD.

The Fort Wayne Commandery Entertained at Warsaw.

The Fort Wayne Knights Templar returned yesterday from Warsaw, where they were in camp. The Warsaw Times has this of the reception tendered them Monday evening: "The reception and banquet tendered by Warsaw Commandery last evening to the visiting Sir Knights of Fort Wayne and their ladies, was, we are informed, by those who were there, a very fine affair. The attendance of Knights from Fort Wayne was not as large as anticipated, but there were Knights present from Plymouth, Bourbon, Larwill, Indianapolis, North Manchester, Elkhart, Milford and Leesburg. Speeches were made; a number of good songs by Loveday's quartette were executed; Mr. John Lathrop executed a very fine cornet solo; Al. Knob gave a comic song, and N. W. Richart a couple of solos, while Superintendent Law, of the Pittsburgh road, responded with two or three songs. The collation spread was very fine, and all in all, it was a very pleasant occasion."

A NEW WRINKLE.

The Special Mail Delivery to be Enlarged.

Postmaster Kaough has information that the postoffice department will soon entirely remodel the present regulations in regard to the 10-cent stamp special delivery letters. The bill passed by congress, and which was signed by the president, instead of restricting this service to offices in town of 4,000 inhabitants or more, extends it to every office in the country, and to all classes of mail matter as well as letters. The postmasters are to receive eight cents for each letter, and are to be allowed to make what arrangements or contracts they may desire to secure the prompt delivery of this class of mail matter. It will not be required that a force of carrier boys should be maintained.

The mysterious presence of water in different rooms of a house near Goshen, the source of which was unknown, has been explained. It was a trick on the part of a mother and daughter to drive the man of the house away.

There will be a reunion of the surviving members of the 29th regiment Indiana volunteers at Magnolia park, Plymouth, Ind., on the 25th and 26th of August. At the same time and place a reunion of the 9th and 73d regiments of Indiana volunteers will take place.
